Now read a text about Leticia Bufoni, a skateboarder. Answer the questions in French.

(1 point par réponse / 1 point per answer)

Letícia Bufoni was born on April 13th, 1983. She is American and Brazilian. She started skateboarding when she was nine years old and is now an international champion. "In my neighbourhood, I was the only girl skating," she says. "Then I started to go to skateparks and I met some girls in Brazil that skated. Then after, maybe not even a year, I started competing in the contests. Everything happened super fast."

At first, her dad didn't want her to skateboard. He said that it was not a sport for girls. Then he changed his mind because he saw her passion and talent and she won the first contest she entered.

Bufoni was also selected to be a member of Brazil's first-ever national skateboarding team. Where does she see women's skateboarding in 10 years? "Just over the past two years it's changed so much," she says. "There are more and more girls coming up now – young girls ripping. I feel like after the Tokyo Olympic Games it's just gonna be huge. I think it'll change everything." Her motto is "Chase your dream and never give up!"

Read this text and answer the questions in English:

In my dreams I'm always running, running, running. Sometimes my feet fly over the ground and I'm sure that if I could just go a little bit faster I'd take off and fly like an eagle. Sometimes my legs feel as heavy as tree trunks, but I know that I must go on and reach the finishing line whatever it costs.

I've been running almost since I was a toddler. As soon as I could toddle, I'd stagger after my father as fast as my little legs would take me when he set out for the market on our donkey.

'Solomon! Come back!' my mother would shout. I wouldn't listen, so she'd have to run after me, snatch me up and laugh with me all the way home.

That was how my childhood began. And I can remember as clearly as anything, the night when everything changed. I was eleven years old. At least, I think I was eleven. In the countryside in Ethiopia, nobody takes much notice of how old you are.

It was the end of the day, and the door of our house was firmly shut. It always made me shiver to think of the night outside. Not just because it was dark and cold, but because there might be a hyena or two, lurking in the darkness, or, even worse, something – demonish.

I'll have to explain what our family home was like, in case you have never been to Ethiopia. It was round, like most other people's houses up there in our cool highlands, and it had a thatched roof that went up to a point. There was only one room, with the fire burning away in the middle. It got a bit smokey, but it kept us warm and gave a glowing light. There was a screen at one end, and our animals lived behind it – at night, that is. In the daytime, of course, they were out grazing.
